5,290

copies, the largest paid circulation of any daily paper in this section.

The Boston Herald remarks: "Re-pelled by the marble heart of Joe Cannon, Congressman Fowler turns to the heart of his Vermont marble quarry for sympathy."

The Montpelier Journal undertakes to correct the writer of "Vermont Mountain Patriot" sketches in the Brattleboro Reformer in what he says about Senator Dillingham. Is it worth while? The writer acquired his political views and many of his views of public men in the office of Senator Page, and they are liable to be more or less biased. Why give them any special weight?

Learn to swim. In May 621 persons were drowned in the United States; in June, 1,170. The figures for July are not yet compiled. But the record for May and June is a sufficient warning of the necessity of knowing how to swim. This knowledge would not stop drownings, but it would greatly lessen the number of deaths from this cause.

The Montpelier Daily Journal, which was first issued nearly twelve years ago from the Golden Fleece building, has moved back to its birthplace and beginning to-day appears as a morning paper. It comes out in enlarged form, handsomely printed, and is new. In fact, it is a paper worthy of the capital city of the state. In Frank T. Parsons it has, probably, the best newspaper business manager in the state to-day, and with W. H. Crockett, for a number of years news editor on the St. Albans Messenger, the all important news and editorial end of the enterprise is well taken care of. Although in the midst of moving, the first copy as a morning paper out to-day is a decided credit to the management.

WHAT IS A RESIDENT?

The law enacted at the last session of the legislature relating to license fees for hunting provides "if an applicant is a bona fide resident of Vermont, or owns real estate therein and occupies the same as a domicile for not less than three months in the year and pays taxes thereon, he shall pay the sum of fifty cents, and said clerk shall thereupon issue a resident hunting license." If the applicant is a non-resident or an alien, he shall pay the sum of $15, together with the clerk's fee of fifty cents.

Is a person who lives in Barre and has made his home here several years, though unaturalized, a resident? Fish and Game Commissioner H. G. Thomas says he is not. What is he, then?

CURRENT COMMENT

The Day of The Ultimate Consumer.

At 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon the Ultimate Consumer came into his own. After long months of weary waiting he awoke this morning to the enjoyment of his heritage. At last he gets what is coming to him, and he gets it, as usual, in the neck.—New York Evening Sun.

JINGLES AND JESTS

Song of The Motelet.

Oh, I am an Aut-mo-bil-ist,
And I sail the bounding pike,
I give my high-gear'd wheels a twist
And go wherever I like,
I bound along o'er the country roads,
Past fresh green fields and farms,
And with what joy my heart explodes
As I breathe the thank-you-marks.I strew the way with butter and eggs
When I hit a grocer's cart,
And once in a while a grocer's legs
And the grocer come apart.
So much bang into a load of hay,
And scatter it to the right,
With a Yoww-ho-ho and Tara-di-ay,
Is a source of sheer delight.No care have I of the sort that chills
The man who is soon to "rust,"
Whenever I note my unpaid bills
I go out and raise the dust.
I raise it here and raise it there
Till it reaches the spreading skies,
And I find enough and plenty more,
To throw in my creditors' eyes.So it's Ho for my bousty Automobile
Aid Hi for my bounding pike!
Let others rage over the horse and wheel
The tame and the arduous like.
Let others rave o'er the horning
That plows through the realm of the coach.
It's for me the car of gasoline
With its glorious honk-honk-honk!

A Soul Kiss.

"That, my dear," said the husband, who had been supping not wisely, but too well, "was a real soul kiss."
"So I judge," said the wife, withdrawing coolly from his embrace, "from the amount of spirit I notice in it."—Tribune.

LIEUTENANT ADAMS.

THE testimony in the Sutton inquiry has been centered largely on the actions and bearing at the time of the death of Lieutenant Sutton of one of his companions, Lieutenant Robert E. Adams, with whom he quarreled on the night of the fatal lark. The cross examination of the witnesses by the lawyer representing Mrs. Sutton, mother of the dead lieutenant, was directed largely to bringing out points in favor of the theory that Sutton did not shoot himself and that the bullet which ended his career was fired by one of his fellow cadets that tragic morning, possibly Lieutenant Adams. Some of the testimony in the case differed materially from that given by young Adams himself, particularly as to who was the aggressor in the fight.

King Edward VII. of England, despite his growing infirmities, maintains his reputation for being as well dressed as many of his subjects. He is always well groomed and has taken up the fashion recently of having his trousers pressed so that the creases come at the sides instead of in front. A photograph secured of him as he was entering his carriage after attending an important function recently shows this feature of the monarch's style of dress, which will doubtless become the vogue speedily, in the British empire, at any rate. The function mentioned was the laying of the foundation stone of the Imperial College of Science and Technology by KING EDWARD AT SOUTH KENSINGTON. his majesty. This institution is at South Kensington and is one of the seats of learning in England where the modern spirit of teaching and research in respect to the sciences is predominant.

The Chicago graft cases, which have attracted so much attention because of the revelations made in this connection, have been conducted under the direction of State Attorney John E. W. Wayman. More than a hundred indictments have been returned, and the corrupt police officers, liquor dealers, gamblers and white slave traders have become alarmed by the evidence piled up against them through the indefatigable efforts of Mr. Wayman and his assistants, who have worked night and day to secure information as to the dubious ways of the classes in question. The movement inaugurated by Mr. Wayman has created much opposition to him among the lawless element, but he has refused to permit political considerations to interfere with his performance of duty.

JOHN E. W. WAYMAN.

Among the speakers at the frigate congress at Seattle, Wash., are Clifford Pinchot, chief of the forest service; United States Senator Cummins of Iowa, Governor Vasey of South Dakota, Governor Curry of New Mexico, Governor Gilchrist of Florida, Governor Wilson of Kentucky, Governor Patterson of Tennessee, Governor Spry of Utah, Governor Norris of Montana, United States Senator Jones of Washington and James J. Hill.

FRESHNESS OF FOOD.

Simple Scotch and English Methods For Preservation Explained.

Consult Maxwell Blake, writing from Dunfermline, says of the simple methods used in Great Britain to keep fruit and eggs fresh:

"A correspondent in Stirlingshire writes me that he has recently conducted some successful experiments in reference to the packing of fruit for transit without the aid of refrigeration, his method being simply to pluck the fruit at height of sun, to avoid all adhering dampness, and immediately pack in prepared cases containing granulated sugar. Care must be taken that the sugar utilized for the purpose is also quite devoid of moisture, and the cases should be so constructed as to be as nearly as possible impervious to atmospheric vapors. Both the sugar and the cases, as may be inferred, should be designed for and admit of constant reuse."

"The great fluctuation in the price of fresh eggs in Great Britain, ranging from 15 cents a dozen in summer to from 60 to 75 cents a dozen in winter—and produced with difficulty even then—gives popularity to the economical practice of artificially preserving them during the cheap season, the most successful method employed by the householder being as follows:

"Mix together in an earthenware jar nine parts of boiled water, which has been thoroughly cooled, and one part of glass water. Glass water is obtained by fusing two parts of quartz sand with one of sodium carbonate, adding one-tenth part of small coal. Place the cool viscous eggs into a jar and cover well with the liquid, continually adding sufficient liquid to keep the eggs entirely covered as others are added. Water glass can be purchased in this country from chemists and generally bears on the labels the exact proportion to be used, varying from 1 to 10 per cent. Eggs preserved in this way are less brittle in the shell than those preserved in lime-water and will sometimes boil without cracking if a small pin point aperture is made in them."

"The proportions used for the lime preservative in Scotland are twenty gallons of water, four of lime and one of salt. Allow to stand for a few hours, then pour it over the eggs in the same way as the water glass. A little lime should be added from time to time during the period of preservation; otherwise the solution will lose its strength. The eggs preserved in this way become rough and brittle and must be handled carefully when taken out for use."

"The popular method of preserving eggs by cold storage in the United States is not at all general in this country, and it is rather surprising that more has not been done along these lines."

"When eggs are only required to be preserved for two or three months they keep very well packed in dry salt or bran. The meat of the egg may shrink and rattle within the shell when shaken, but its edibility is not impaired. Coating the egg with vaseline or butter will also keep it for a short time, or any application which effectively seals the pores of the shell and excludes air will prolong the freshness of eggs. If it is even momentarily submerged in boiling water the albumen thereby becomes sufficiently coagulated to prevent the entrance of air."

Poultry Pointers.

A cellar cave is the best place for the incubator if it is operated in hot weather.

Even with but a few birds it is worth while to use trap nests and know which ones are paying their board.

Bath water in abundance is as good for ducks as dust bath for hens. Breeding ducks especially should be amply provided.

Encourage the fowls to follow the plow when breaking the sod. They will pick up many worms and bugs that would otherwise injure the crop planted and convert them into eggs.

More careful attention should be given to the dressing, packing and shipping of poultry on the farm than is generally done. Uniformity is one great thing with market poultry, and generally the most salable is the medium sized bird having a plump and shapely body.

Young turkeys are very delicate and must be handled very carefully in order to raise a good percentage of the brood. They are better cared for when away from the older birds than with them, since the older ones are such inveterate wanderers that many of the little ones are lost.

Plenty of exercise is necessary for little chicks, but it is not best to allow them to run in the tall grass before the dew has dried away. They should be kept in the coop until after 8 a. m.; then they can be turned out and allowed to run. If it is not desirable to allow the hen to run, stretch a long wire and tie the hen to a ring, so she can pass from one end of the wire to the other.

Not more than forty hens should be kept in run. Thirty would do much better. The larger the flock is the sooner they clear off the surface food. During the spring and summer, where fowls have the free range of the farm, there is plenty of room for a large flock, but when fowls are limited in their runs the flocks must be smaller. Unless other conditions are supplied a large flock will eat up the predia.

There never was a day that did not bring its own opportunity for doing good that never could have been done before and never can be again.—W. H. Burleigh.

Aborigines of Australia.

There are now 75,000 of the aboriginal population in Australia. Of this number there are about 20,000 in the colony of Queensland. Queensland has an elaborate system for looking after the welfare of the blacks by means of "protectors" stationed all over the colony to see that the natives are fed and clothed and shielded from interference with white people. Many of the natives are over six feet in height. Like most savages, they are polygamists, but they are not cannibals. The natives under civilization have developed habits of economy and saving. They have made good progress in reading and writing, but missionary reports state that teaching them arithmetic is hopeless.

Thames Embankment Finished.

The Thames embankment is finished at last! The guidebooks tell us that it was finished in 1870, but this is a slight error, for it was only a day or two ago that the last of the piles, after forty-seven years' residence, in the mud opposite the Temple pier, were removed. They had originally been cut down, it seems, to bed level and left, but the wash and drag of the mud in time exposed them and rendered them dangerous to small craft; hence their recent removal, all sound, like many a drawn tooth.—London Chronicle.

The Torpedo in Warfare.

The day has gone by when the torpedo can be regarded as an unreliable instrument of war of strictly limited use, says Cassier's Magazine. Today the British navy is about to be equipped with a torpedo which will carry a destructive charge of upward of 200 pounds and will possess an effective range of over 7,000 yards, which it will be able to cover at an average speed of 31 knots.
